CHICAGO, ILL., April 24.—Frank Bald-win, Tom Daly and Martin Sullivan have win, Tom Daly and Martin Suillivan have been released by the Chicago Club. The two first named were not satisfied with the salary the management wished to pay. Before the Races.

Before 10 o'clock this morning the grounds at Ivy City began to take on their race-meeting appearance. An old negro drove a horse dragging a many toothed harrow after him around the track, effacing the prints of the racers' plates that were left after yesterday morning's speeding. A few of the horses not to run to-day had been jogging over the wide sweep of the track, but they were driven off by the old negro with his short horse and its harrow. A chorus Before the Races.

of impatient neights came from the stables, and the force of gate-keepers and watchmen was being marshaled and each assigned to his position for the day. By 11 o'clock a stream of carriages began to nour through the wide west gate. They were all men in the carriages, and most of the early comers were club members. Before noon the excentive committee was on the ground and hard at work. Secretary Melatyre was early there, and he said, "A splendid day, and we'll have a splendid meeting. The day was all that could be wished fo the opening of the League season in Wash-A gentle breeze softened the heat of the otherwise too-fierce rays of old Sol The local patrons of the game went out in ness the struggle between the Phillies and were black with people and seats in the grand stand were at a premium long before 4:30, the time for the beginning of the game. Many ladies lent brightness to the occaion and a brass band added its harmonies to the scene. There were the same old familiar pictures about the grounds, the same old oyster vendor with his cruet of vinegar and pinch of salt for his customers' tastes. The man with a market basket of lunch was on hand, while the old-time cry of "Sco'-cards" was heard on every side. The two nines arrived soon after 4 in riumphal procession of a band wagon and six carriages. The Phillies took the field for preliminary practice. Meanwhile the crowds continued to pour in. Then the gray-suited Senators came down in club front from their quarters and the band struck up and the bleaching boards let out half started, though. Mr. Fessenden officiated as umpire.

The batting order was as follows: Washington. Philadelphia. Philadelphia. Wood, If. Wilmot, If. Delchanty 2b. Fogarty, cf. Wine, sa. Thompson, rf. Mulvey, 3b, Morrill, 3b. Farrar, 1b. Ebright, c. Buffinton, p. Keefe, p. O'Day, 10th. Casey, 10th.

Delehanty hit feebly and died at first. Fogarty took first on balls. Little Keefe was evidently nervous. Fogarty divel for and Fogarty went to third. Big Sam Thompson couldn't raise it further than Myers and the side retired.

Hoy opened the ball by a clever hit be ween short and second and stole second on passed ball. Wilmot hit slowly to Farrar and excited universal enthusiasm by beat ing the ball to the base. Hoy took third. Sam Wise hit high to Wood and took his eat. Hoy lead off and Clements threw wild to catch him. The ball went spinning out to left field and the little Mute scored. Wilmot took third. Myers flew out to Thompson. Morrill was greeted with cheers as he stepped to the plate. Alas! be sent up a foul skyward which was gath

The band hasn't been heard from for ten minutes. "Ball three," yells Fessenden. You could cut the universal depression with a meat axe, but "strike me, strike two," revives spirits. "Ball four," and Clements takes first on balls. Buffinton hit sharply to Myers, who threw it to the plate, but Ebright muffed and eturned it home badly. Farrar scored.

Two runs. Delehanty hit a crusher to right field and Clements, Buffinton and Wood scored. Fogarty struck out, Delehanty tried to steal third, but failed to reach the bag before John Morrill had the ball on him. Five runs. The game was as good as lost. Carney flew out to centre. Shoch took first on bulls. Ebright hit hard to left. Keefe retired on a hit to Irwin. Hoy went to his seat on a slow hit to Buffinton.

Third Inning-Sam Thompson couldn't to the bench with his fellows. Mulvey flaw out to Myers. Captain Irwin took first on balls. Farrar ended the laning by flying out to Shoch. Wilmot sent Washington stock up to

It was a field day at the White House to day in every sense of the word, and not a spot upstairs or down was free from the presence of office-seeker or tourist. They sat on the steps leading to the library, swarmed in the coridors, and a portion of the overflow monopolized all the chairs and settees in Private Secretary Halford's office. Such a throng has not been seen at the Executive Mansion since a few days after inauguration, and there seems to be a revival of interest and a fear that the President is making haste too slow. Then the approaching departure of the President for New York has stimulated Congressmen to hurry up their cases, and among those who saw the President to-day were Senators Spooner, Hawley, Manderson, Balme, Evarts, Hiscock, Higgins and Allison Representatives Brewer, Kelly, Farquhar, Grosvemor, Stockbridge, Bingham, Harner, Anderson, Taylor, Ohio; Darlington, Sawyer and Taylor, Tennessee; Governor Beaver, Pennsylvania; Hon. B. K. Bruce, Treasurer Huston, Daniel McCauley, Joseph S. Fullerton, J. H. Burford and B. F. Harness, Indiana; Daniel Lothrop, Boston, Mass.; Hon. John F. Lewis, Virginia. When the President went down to the East Boom there was no diminution in the crowd, and the public reception was utilized by the Congregationalists, now holding a convention in this city, to paytheir respects to the Executive. It was one of the busiest days that the President has passed since he entered the White House, and the summous to luncheon was gladly received.

A party of persistent Virginians, headed by ex-Collector Brady, held possession of Executive Clerk Cook's office against all comers and would not leave the White House until they saw the President. In this party were Edar Allan, Henry DeB. Clay, and H. B. Nichols, prominent in Grand Army circles, and who stated that their visit was solely in the interest of this order.

Arrival of the Phillies.

The Philadelphia ball team arrived in Washington this morning, shortly after 11 o'clock, over the Baltimore and Ohio road. Manager Wright brought thirteen men with him, as follows: Buffinton, Casey, Gleason, Clements, Hallman, Decker, Farrar, Delahanty, Mulvey, Irwin, George Wood, Fogarty and Thompson. Wood will play in left field and Fogarty in certre field, and the men will bat in this order: Wood, Delahanty, Mulvey, Thompson, Fogarty, Irwin, Farrar, catcher and pitcher.

Wood and Fogarty signed yesterday. They both appear to be in excellent condition, and they will at once take their places on the team. The financial part of the transaction was soon settled. The players were not exorbitant, and the club officials recognized that the worth of the men were somewhat enhanced because of their having participated in the great baseball trip around the world. Mitchell and Kirby were given notice of their release yesterday. In speaking of them Manager Wright said: "They are both good men, but we have no place for them. Kirby is a natural hitter, and with another year's experience will be a valuable man. Mitchell should develop into a first-class pitcher."

Speaking of the recent assertion that baseball induces beart disease, Captain Irwin of the Phillies is quoted as saying "I do not believe that baseball causes heart disease any more than other athletic sports, or even half as much as some. While I am not fully versed from the hygienic point oview, I know from experience that some times the game may have some little effect on the heart, as, for instance, in the beginning of the ball sesson, when a player endeavors to do much base running. He is not in proper condition physically. Whenever a player slaps the sphere for a home run just after a winter of idleness, he is preity well done up after making the circuit of the bases, and his heart beats at a terrific pace. Sometimes I have heard a man's heart thump distinctly at a distance of ten feet. But if a play

MRS, CARTER SAW SNAKES.

CHICAGO, I.L., April 24.—When the se-dect audience had been seated at yesterday's performance of "The Carter Scandal" the lect audience had been seated at yesterday's performance of "The Carter Scandal" the curtain was rung up and Susan Peterson was seen in the witness chair, ready to be cross-examined. She had induced Mrs. Carter to show her the family skeleton by telling her she would not go to Europe with her unless she was made a confidant of. Susan told how insane Mrs. Carter was when she was in Europe. She said her mistress saw anakes and things, and licard knockings. Mrs. Dudley then took the stand and described her daughter's condition as "very nervous." She charged the sisters of Mr. Carter with having caused the greater part of the trouble. She didn't think Miss Margaret Carter treated Mrs. Carter as a sister should, when she thought strawberries in the winter time at $2 a box were a pretty expensive luxury. It was those dreadful strawberries which caused that blow on the cheek from Leslie. Dr. Oscar A. King, superintendent of the Sanitartum at Lake Geneva, testified that he examined Mrs. Carter in January, 1887, and pronounced her insane. In the transom of her room she fancied she saw the face of Ernest Carter, her brother-in-law, and anakes crawling on the floor. Sometimes she imagined her food had been poisoned by Ernest Carter, and refused to cat anything. In the patient's mind Ernest Carter took on the form of hideous red reptiles, and she thought the gas-pipes looked like serpeauts. In fact, snakes were very frequently seen in the lady's imaginative moments.

The trial was resumed this morning The trial was resumed this morning with the usual crowd in attendance. Dr. King occupied the stand. Mr. Mills conducted the cross-examination, and reviewed with the witness the conduct and condition of Mrs. Carter at the Sanitarium and the medical treatment she received; then the effort of the defense to show Mrs. Carter's insanity while at the Sanitarium was feigned was resumed.

Cal McCarthy's Next Fight.

Joe Early, the lucky backer and manager of Cal McCarthy, has everything in readiness for Cal's fight with Johnny Murphy, which takes place in Boston on Friday night. McCarthy has almost completed his training for the affair, and when he meets his man in the ring he will be in the best condition possible. Mr. Early said: "We will have to be in good trim to get there, and I think Cal will be able to do it, or I'm very much mistaken. I understand that some of the Boston sports will have plenty of money to lay out, and if it's true, they will find that we Jerseymen and New Yorkers are very accommodating in that line. Why, I think Cal will whim—well, not in a walk exactly, but pretty near it. Cal is nearly down to weight, and will have no trouble whatever to weigh in at 114 or 115 pounds on Friday."

As president of the American Forestry Congress he came here to confer with a number of men interested in forestry. They held a meeting this morning and then called on the President, the object being to have him embody forestry in his message to Congress next winter. The Governor declined to say anything about Senator Rutan's charges, except to remark: "The Senator is sick, you know."

and presecutor, arose. Upon the judge-advocate of a court-martial much depends, as it is his exposition of the bearings of military law upon the case and evidence that influences the court to a great extent. When Major Davis addressed the Court he did not held in his hand a big bulk of papers containing a mosterly legal discussion, as was the case in the Lydecker trial, but he held one type-written page, and from it read the following:

"May it please the Court, there is nothing in the argument of the learned counsel for the defense in point of law or fact to which I feel called upon to reply. In the general presentation of the case in each succeeding incident of the trial and in the discussion of the questions that have arisen from time to time, my endeavor has been to restrain my action within such limits of forboarance as were consistent with the interest of the United States.

Another murder mystery has come to the attention of the police. This time the vicilim is a young mulatto girl, whose murderers have left few if any traces by which they can be followed. The girl herself is a stranger in the neighborhood where she was found and no one could identify her.

Last Monday afternoon a number of children who were playing in the Sheriff road, near John Wright's place, just over the District line, found the body of a light mulatto girl apparently about 25 years old. She was covered with mud, and her shoes were filled with clay, as if she had been dragged some distance. Her skull was crushed in as if by blows with a blunt instrument. The indications are that the murder occurred on Friday or Saturday.

An inquest was held yesterday morning on the spot by Coroner D. F. Sheriff, and the jury found that she came to her death by baving her skull crushed in by some person or persons unknown. The body was buried near Bladensburg yesterday afternoon. A wagon track was noticed which would indicate that the girl or her corpse was brought from Bennings' to the place where the discovery was made. Sheriff Darnall of Prince George's County is now investigating the case. The woman's clothing was brought to Police Headquarters, It consists of a beaded Jersey coat, a black dress with brocaded frout and a black basque of diagonal cloth. Her shoes buttoned on the side and had recently been half soled, evidently by a country cobbler.

The colored population above Bennings are being much excited over the affair, but no one seems to know who the woman was. A wagon was heard going down Sheriff's road last Saturday night but no one seems to know who the woman was. A wagon was heard going down Sheriff's road last Saturday night and it is believed that the murder may have been the sequel to an attempted outrage. The wagon tracks turn just at the place where the body was found as if the vehicle had come there for the especial purpose of depositing the body. The gossips have been busy at work, and the news of the affair is current with everybody. The colored people have been taking an especial interest in the matter, and they are satisfied that there is no one missing who anawers the description of the dead woman. The only colored shoemaker about the place The only colored shoemaker about the place was struck by a train and killed some three weeks ago. The scene of the murder is a lonely place where the road passes through the woods. The police are busily at work on the case.

ANOTHER BRIDGE-JUMPER.

A Connecticut Tough Tries to Emulate Brodie.

New York, April 21.—Pat Carroll is known as the tough man of Norwalk, Conn. He entered Steve Brodie's saloon, on the Bowery, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, swallowed four fingers of whisky and then challenged Brodie to jump with him from the Brooklyn bridge. Brodie laughed at him. Carroll took several more drinks and then left the saloon. He was next seen on the back of a vender's wagon that was crossing the bridge from the New York side. When the wagon had passed the pier about fifty feet Carroll sprang out, and with the agility of a circus athlete mounted the bridge railing. A policema spied him, but before be could detain him Norwalk's tough man was flying through the air. He struck the water about forty feet from the pier and floated apparently lifeless down the river. He was picked up by the deck hands of a tug-boat and ten minutes later was on his way to Chambers Street Hospital. He is injured internally, but will live.

New York, April 24.—Patrick Carroll, the man who jumped from the Brooklyn bridge last evening, is pronounced out of danger by the Chambers Street Hospital officials. He is considerably shaken up, but by to-morrow he will be able to appear in the Tombs Police Court, where, in all probability, he will be sentenced to the Island for three months.

The letter goes on to say "that in order that the service shall not become completely crippled it has become necessary to transfer horses from one system to another, which imposes extra work on them." There are now three horses on the sick list and as many are required to fill their places, but on account of the smallness of the appropriation now available the Commissioners could order the purchase of one. The cost was $215, and he will do duty at the Third Precinct.

ing of Argument.

At to-day's session of the Armes courtmartial, Judge Hubbell, counsel for the defense concluded his argument. He cited authorities to endeavor to show that the control of the public streets of Washington are under the control of Congress, and therefore Colonel Canaday, Sergeaut-at-Arms of the Senate, had perfect authority to appoint Captain Armes an aide and a member of the President's guard. Judge Hubbell then devoted himself to the specifications in the charge and pointed out phases of the evidence which he alleged disproved the charges.

When Judge Hubbell concluded his remarks, Major Davis, the judge-advocate of a court-martial much depends, as it is his exposition of the bearings of THE RETIRING GENERAL RECEIVED WITH CHEERS.

PRICE TWO CENTS

He Crosses the Channel in Safety and is Now Within the Portals of an English Hotel-What Will They do

Baussers, April 24.—General Boulanger, Count Dillon and six others of the Gea-eral's sympathizers left this city at 7 o'clock this morning for Ostend, where they took the steamer for England. The party was gloomy and dejected. Very few people gathered to see the General off, and there vere no cheers given or any enthusiasm man-fested by the few who were at the station. The party sailed from Ostend at 9 o'clock, About 200 people winessed the General's departure from Ostend, but no cheers were given here. M. Rochefort has remained at Brussels, but it is reported that he will be expelled shortly.

DOURN, ENG., April 24.—General Bounager and his companions have arrived.

langer and his companions have arrived here after a rough passage across the channel, during which they were quite sea sick. Numerous triends of the Boulangists met them here and gave them a cordial welcome to England. A police commissary from Calais watched the party in the interests of France and will report to his government every move the General makes. The party proceeded to London in a special train put at Boulangar's service by the Southeastern Bailway Company.

London, April 24.—About 2,000 people had gathered at the station of the Southeastern Bailway to gain a glunges of General Boulanger when he arrived from Dover. When the latter's train came in the crowd pressed around the entrances and cheers, hisses and grouns were mingled as the General Boulanger when he arrived from Dover.

forbearance as were consistent with the interest of the United States, whose case it is my duty to present.

"In the examination of the witnesses that have been called on either side 1 have had no other desire than to see that the truth that lies in their minds should be made known. The case in all its phases is now before the court. My duty ends where yours begins, and with a single request. I will close. Not for any merit in this case, but in the name and for the sake of the helpless and dependent ones who had no part in the events out of which this litigation grew, but upon whom its grievous burden must chiefly fall, I ask, with all the consideration which attaches to my station, that the evidence that has been given may be charitably and liberally construct; that every scrap of testimony that makes for innocence may pass, with undiminished force, to his credit; that every reasonable doubt that may arise shall be resolved in favor of the accused. With this, may it please the court, I submit the case." hisses and grouns were mingled as the Gen eral made his appearance. The public in eral made his appearance. The public in general, however, appear to his spathetic in regard to the French exile.

LONDON, April 24.—General Boulanger and his party arrived here at 3:20 o'clock this aftercoon. He has made the Hotel Bristol his headquarters for the present. The General was cheered by a large crowd which gathered outside the hotel.

PRIDE MUST BE SWALLOWED.

The French Must go to England to Build the Fanama Canal.

London, April 24.—The French are asking if the history of the Suez Canal is to be repeated. It is galling for the promoters of the Fanama Canal to be compelled to come to England for assistance, but the matter is so desperate that neither pride nor sentiment can be allowed to interfere with business, and the only hope of the subscribers is the aid of English capital. Strange to say, considering the history of the De Lesseps ditch, it may not be so impossible as it appears to secure even the immense sums necessary to finish it.

To complete the canal would be a triumph of English engineering, and several contracting firms have signified a willingness to take hold of the affair in concert with a moderate guaranty. One of the all-important points is to so arrange matters as to interest American expitalists in the project and thus allay all fears as to international jealousy or complications. Within the last two days many lengthy telegrams relating to the matter are said to have passed between London and New York, but it is understood that parties in the United States advise further delay in the expectation that the plant and franchise may be obtained at a much lower rate than the French holders are willing to accept just now.

London Shopkeepers Grumbling.
London, April M.—There is grumbling among the shopkeepers, to which this Queen is supposed to have practically yielded by abridging the period of mourning for the Duchess of Cambridge, though there is no prospect that Her Majesty will ever overcome her aversion to London as a residence. Her prejudice is said to have been further marked of late by a morbid fear of assassination, and it was owing to the expression of this feeling that the late act which surprised so many was passed, inflicting the severest penalties on any person who shall discharge firearms with intent to injure or alarm Her Majesty.
